

Short Review: “Forever Young” (1992) by Dr. John L. Flynn

Forever Young (1992). Warner Brothers, color, 102 min. Director: Steve Miner.

Writer: Jeffrey Abrams. Producer: Bruce Davey. Cast: Mel Gibson, Jamie Lee Curtis, Elijah Wood, Isabel Glasser.

Test Pilot Captain Dan McCormick (Gibson) agrees to enter an experimental cryogenic program in the 1930s when his lover dies, and is, alas, frozen for over 50 years as part of a forgotten project. In 1992, he is accidentally awakened by a small boy (Wood), so he follows him home to the boy's attractive mom (Curtis). You might not be surprised to learn that there is a wonderful airplane flying sequence and a happy ending, too. Well, just keep your handkerchiefs close at hand. Gibson could have delivered a few more laughs if the script would have allowed them.

Copyright 2008 by John L. Flynn, Ph.D.